

W. & J. SLOANE

ESTABLISHED OVER 76 YEARS

"CHAUMONT" SEAMLESS CHENILLE RUGS

Distinguished by a durable, luxurious weave and colorings of unusual richness, these splendid Rugs are admirably adapted to the most important rooms of the well appointed home.

We carry in stock the 9-ft.x12-ft. size, in a great variety of beautiful Plain Colors, including all the newest, most desirable shades.

Chenille Carpets, in seamless widths of 9 ft., 12 ft., 15 ft. and 20 ft., can be made up into handsome Rugs of any length desired, at reasonable cost.

1508 H Street N.W.

Telephone Main 925.

Goldheim's

"Pledged to Quality"
Fourteenth St. at New York Ave.

Store Hours, 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mr. Goldheim Talks:

"Double-breasted Suits to the front, eh?"

Don't forget your Hat—the best American and foreign makes here at $4.00 to $15.00.

"Right," responded Mr. Goldheim. "Men and young men are taking to the new double-breasted modes as never before. The new graceful swing of the coat, with its extra length of coat, bell shape sleeves and 12-inch center vent in back, are tailoring features they like."

"Dark blue unfinished worsteds are having the call right now. All sizes here and models for every type of man at $45.00. They prove a winning proposition."

"The Stock as a Whole—?"

"Nothing too good to say about it," replied Mr. Goldheim. "Suits and top coats in every style and pattern of herringbone chevrons, unfinished worsteds, serges, Oxford grays and tweeds—a galaxy of models, offering choice of the best talent in America. $30.00 to $70.00."

SOUTH'S VETERANS IN LEAGUE DEBATE

Indorsement of President on Program—Blue and Gray Unity Upheld.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, October 8.—Resolutions indorsing President Wilson and touching on the peace treaty and league of nations, as well as a recommendation regarding the suggestion that all patriotic societies of the country, such as the United Confederate Veterans, the Grand Army of the Republic and the American Legion, should unite, were the subject of discussion by the United Confederate Veterans attending their twenty-fourth annual reunion here today.

The resolutions were ready to be introduced, it was learned from leaders of the reunion, and were expected to be acted upon during the day. Election of officers and solemn memorial services for the Confederate dead were other features for the day.

Reports of committees appointed at the first business session yesterday also came up today. For the memorial services the veterans and all auxiliary organizations were called together to make these impressive exercises a joint affair.

Spend Night at Camp.

Hundreds of the veterans spent last night at Camp Johnston, the tented city at Piedmont Park, despite the downpour of rain that soaked the ground and tents late yesterday. They refused to leave about a thousand others accepted offers of hotels, fraternal organizations and private citizens to spend the night on cots in halls and extra rooms.

Meetings of all the organizations have been marked by fervid patriotism and pleas by speakers for still better understanding between north and south in order that the elements represented by veterans of the civil war and their descendants may join in bringing the country safely through the unsettled period following the world war. Gen. J. E. Woods of Marianna, Ark., and State Senator Harrison of Oklahoma, especially stressed these sentiments in addresses at yesterday's sessions.

Stoutly maintaining that the south was right and expressing little patience with those who express sympathy with the Confederate soldiers fought for what they thought was right, Gen. Woods, himself a veteran, maintained the result of the war between the states has been accepted and there is no desire of the veterans today but to work for a greater and better United States.

Reunion to End Tomorrow.

The reunion, attended by more than nine thousand veterans and already termed one of the most successful ever held, comes to a close tomorrow with a grand parade in which practically all the old soldiers are insisting they will march. Foot as they did when reviewed by Lee.

Social affairs marked by the presence of scores of sponsors and maids of honor have been an enjoyable feature of the reunion in which the aged veterans have taken a lively part. The final grand ball will be given tonight.

Mounted, Charge Mob Marching on Fifth Avenue Without Permit; Banners Incendiary.

NEW YORK, October 8.—Heads were broken on 5th avenue yesterday when mounted police charged a mob of several thousand radicals who attempted to parade up the avenue without a permit. Banners, which bore a number of incendiary slogans, were confiscated by the police and half filled a patrol wagon. A number of arrests were made. The police said the parade was organized by a Russian newspaper published here, entitled Novy Mir.

Devices on the banners read: "Bloody hounds of Russia!" "Deport us all to the soviet!" "You want to give us democracy, but keep it to yourselves!" "Open the jails!"

100 Paraders Injured.

The riot started after the procession had gone only two or three blocks. Refusing the request of a policeman to see their permit for the parade, the officer was forced to call for aid, and before the melee ended the services of a score of mounted policemen and fifty reserves were required. The mounted officers charged into the crowd and 100 or more of the paraders were injured.

Four men and a young woman, all of them aliens, were taken to a police headquarters from the headquarters of the Russian soviet bureau by detectives from the "bomb squad." Considerable radical literature was said to have been found on them, but they were not placed under arrest. The police detained them pending an opinion from the district attorney's office as to whether they could be held for distributing bolshevik literature.

A fifth man, who gave his name as Anthony Toneski, was arrested by detectives later as one of the ring-leaders.

Becomes Soviet Meeting.

What had been advertised as a meeting of labor men in behalf of Thomas Mooney here last night developed chiefly into a meeting of praise for the soviet government of Russia. Robert C. Minor, newspaper writer and cartoonist, drew a glowing picture of the soviet form of government as he had observed it in Russia. He declared the story of nationalization of women was a "monumental classic lie," and that the story of the soviet employing Chinese mercenaries was equally false.

Ludley Field Malone declared that America was not suffering from immigration, but from a dearth of statesmanship. Labor here must organize itself as completely as it has done in England, he said, and take the reins in its own hands and run things. "Whether the league of nations goes through as it is," concluded Mr. Malone, "I am not alarmed as to the future, for Europe will have a new kind of government all the way through before long, and they will attend to any deficiencies there are in the treaty as it is today."

WOULD ABANDON ZONE PLAN.

NEWARK, N. J., October 8.—Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Railway Company, has notified the New Jersey public utility commission that he wished to abandon the zone fare system inaugurated on the company's trolley lines throughout the state several weeks ago.

Operation of the system has resulted in disorders at many points, particularly in Camden, where a boycott against patronizing the company's cars has been in effect.

Aviator on Fire Patrol Killed.

EUGENE, Ore., October 8.—Lieut. J. Webb of Glendale, Calif., was killed and Sergt. John C. McGinn of Salt Lake City was seriously injured when the airplane Lieut. Webb was piloting fell into a tall spin and crashed to the earth at Medford Tuesday. The aviators were on fire patrol duty.

QUARTERMASTER CORPS ABOLITION PROTESTED

House Committee Hears Officers Assert Proposed General Staff Plan Is Costly.

Protest by Quartermaster Corps officers against the proposed abolition of this branch of the military service in the new reorganization program for general staff control was heard by the House committee yesterday, while still further Army squabbles were aired before a Senate subcommittee.

The Quartermaster Corps officers said that it was costing the country $20,000,000 more a year to operate under the general staff plan than under theirs.

Before a Senate subcommittee on the same subject Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, chief signal officer, and Col. Charles McK. Salzman, his assistant, presented objections to general staff treatment of the Signal Corps. Maj. Gen. Harry L. Rogers, quartermaster general, urged that Army reorganization legislation provide for the consolidation of the services so as to preserve the old Quartermaster Corps.

Col. Charles P. Daley and other officers informed the committee that a consolidation of purchase and storage, ordered recently by Gen. Rogers, would have resulted in the saving of millions of dollars, but that a controversy between Gen. Rogers and Maj. Gen. George W. Butt, director of the purchase, storage and traffic bureau, resulted in Assistant Secretary Crowell setting aside the order of Gen. Rogers after it had been in force one week. Within that time seventy officers had been listed with the quartermaster general as "surplus," according to the testimony.

Spanish Labor Delegation Coming.

MADRID, October 7.—Viscount D'Eza and the other members of the Spanish delegation to the international labor congress at Washington will leave here for Havre Saturday. An American transport will convey them to the United States from the French port.

U. S. "COMMISSIONER" TO THE BALTICS SAILS

J. A. Gade Says Trip Signifies America Will Seek to Restore Order in Provinces.

NEW YORK, October 8.—Appointed "commissioner" of the United States to the Baltic provinces of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, John Alleyne Gade of New York sailed from here today for Brest on the U. S. S. America.

Appointment of Mr. Gade by the State Department had hitherto been unannounced.

The fact that he did not bear the title "minister on special mission" was interpreted here as meaning that such action might imply recognition of the governments with which he is to be concerned.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

$2.75 Philadelphia

$2.50 Chester

$2.25 Wilmington

War Tax 8% additional

Sunday, October 19

SPECIAL TRAIN

Lrs. Washington (Union Station) 7:30 a.m. Returning, leave Broad Street station 7:15 p.m., West Philadelphia, 7:20 p.m., Chester, 7:42 p.m., Wilmington, 8:01 p.m.

Tickets on sale Saturday preceding excursion.

25 Similar Excursion November 2

The right is reserved to limit the sale of tickets to the capacity of equipment available.

Pennsylvania R. R.

The American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

DECLARES WAR ON DENIKINE

LONDON, October 8.—Confirmation of recent reports that Gen. Simon Petlura, the Ukrainian military leader, had declared war on Gen. Denikine, the Cossack anti-bolshevik commander in South Russia, was given today by the Ukrainian diplomatic mission in London.

The mission stated that it had received an official telegram from Kamenetz-Podolsk making this announcement.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen, and who served as a member of the commission sent to the Baltic provinces by the peace commissioners last spring, said, before boarding the America, that his departure signified this country would "sympathetically follow events in the Baltic provinces" and seek to aid in restoring order there.

Mr. Gade was accompanied by Edward Curtis, his secretary, formerly a major in the American aviation service. From Brest they will proceed to Paris and thence to Libau, Riga and Reval. The provinces are at present without any diplomatic or official representative from America.

The mission of John Alleyne Gade to the Baltic provinces is without special significance, State Department officials said today, and he has no diplomatic status. It was explained that he was a commissioner for the region to which he is going to keep the State Department in touch with events there.

Mr. Gade, an architect, who spent the last two years as naval attaché to the American legation in Copenhagen